Once, there lived a farmer in a village. The farmer wanted to have more space on his farm to grow plants. He decided that he needed to cut down some of the trees surrounding his farm. The next day, he brought a chainsaw to cut down the trees.

He was prepared to cut down one of the trees when he overheard a voice calling out to him. He looked everywhere but could not see where the voice was coming from. Finally, he looked up and saw that a tree was talking. He was surprised and fascinated at the same time.

‘Please, don’t cut me,’ the tree pleaded. ‘I’m very useful to the environment.’

The farmer thought about it and asked the tree. ‘Why are you useful to the environment?’

The tree explained to the farmer that it was very useful in a lot of ways. First, a tree can help to make rain and grow the plants. The roots of a tree can prevent soil erosion. Finally, the air that a tree emits made the air fresh and clean.
