A cat, a dog, a hen and a buffalo lived on a farm. One evening, they sat down and talked about how useful they were to the farmer.

"I am the most useful," said the cat. "I keep the rats and mice away."

"I lay eggs and the farmer sells the eggs in the market. So I help the farmer to earn money," said the hen.

"Ahhh, but also get eaten," laughed the cat and the dog. The hen kept very quiet.

Then, the dog said, "I guard the house and the farm. I also guard the chicken coop and make sure the hens and the eggs are not eaten by the fox. So, I am the most useful."

"All that you have said is true," the buffalo said.

"So, you agree that I am the most useful?" asked the dog.

"No, he thinks I am the most useful," said the cat.

The buffalo replied, "I plough the field. Without me, the farmer would not be able to grow any paddy. I also pull the cart to the market so that the farmer can sell the paddy and the eggs. Without me, the farmer would not have any money and you all would have no food to eat."

All the other animals thought about what the buffalo said and they left the buffalo in the shed quietly.
